

It ain't gonna happen...

Oh Yes It Is

But your ego will be better served,
if you throw this entry form away right now!

The Barkley runners are coming back to Frozen Head in 2006. Neither arrogant government employees, freezing rain, misinterpreted laws, nor dark of night will deter them from their duly appointed rounds... only fear and weakness will do that.

There is a lot of new stuff out there, and we will go places we ain't never been before.

But one thing is still the same.

I really want to run the Barkley. I have been warned how hard it is. I have been warned that I am entirely responsible for my own safety and well being. I know that I might get hurt out there, but I promise to do everything possible to make my adventure a safe one. I agree to accept the decision of race management, should they deem me unfit to continue. And I agree to reimburse all expenses, should a search or rescue be required on my behalf. If I am stupid enough to attempt the Barkley, I deserve to be held responsible for any result of that attempt, be it financial, physical, mental, or any thing else.
